Dr. Ethan S. Rogers, MD

Breast Surgeon

University of Maryland
St. Joseph Breast Center

After perusing his family's books about the human body, Ethan Rogers announced at age 5 that he would become a doctor. In fact, the native Baltimorean didn't consider another career option.

Destined to follow in the footsteps of his grandfathers (both of whom were general surgeons and general practitioners), he studied hard – graduating from The University of Maryland School of Medicine, completing a comprehensive surgical residency at Carilion Roanoke Memorial Hospital and undergoing specialty training at Baylor University Medical Center.

In 2013, Ethan S. Rogers, MD, returned to Baltimore as a skilled and compassionate breast surgeon at the nationally-recognized Breast Center at University of Maryland St. Joseph Medical Center

"I love that I have the ability to care for the patients in the community in which I grew up, taking them along their journey from fear and uncertainty back to their lives free from cancer," he says.

As a top breast surgeon at UM St. Joseph, Dr. Rogers supports evaluation, management and prevention strategies for women and men at high risk for the development of breast cancer. He works in tandem with the breast team's oncology specialists to provide advanced, holistic and personalized care for lifelong health and well-being.

"Everyone here is dedicated to providing the best care and experience for patients to go along with those outcomes," he says. "Exceptional care and support will start the moment patients enter the building and continue with every encounter."

Treating the surgeon-patient relationship as a "partnership," Dr. Rogers takes as much time as needed to ensure that patients can make informed decisions about their care – noting "that can mean hours of conversations before we even start their treatment."

When asked what's the best part of his job, Dr. Rogers proudly answers: "The results. It's tremendously satisfying that, for most cases of breast cancer, we can provide a long-lasting cure."

Dr. David Buchalter

President, Board of Trustees
Har Sinai Oheb Shalom
Congregation

Inaugural Senior Rabbi
Rachel Sabath
Beit-Halachmi, Ph.D.

Inaugural Cantor
Alexandra Fox

Har Sinai Oheb Shalom Congregation (HSOSC) has the unique distinction of being the oldest, newest and most evolving Reform congregation in Baltimore.

As a congregation of founding members, it officially launched in September 2019, following the merger of two historic institutions: Har Sinai Congregation and Temple Oheb Shalom.

A transition was underway to create a unified warm, inclusive and socially conscious 21st century Reform congregation. And it didn't stop with the COVID-19 global pandemic.

During the past year of lockdowns, HSOSC hosted "drive by" holiday celebrations and adopted a virtual platform for weekly Kabbalat Shabbat and Havdalah services, lectures, concerts, adult education and religious school classes, the B'nai Mitzvah program and High Holy Day services.

Not to mention, HSOSC used Zoom to conduct national searches and hire its inaugural clergy: Rabbi Rachel Sabath Beit-Halachmi, Ph.D., and Cantor Alexandra Fox – who would officially join the congregation, July 1, 2021.

"We are fully merged and now that we're turning the corner on the pandemic, we look forward to enhancing our connections in person," says Dr. David Buchalter, HSOSC's inaugural board president.

With the building reopened, look for indoor and outdoor "prenegs," Kabbalat Shabbat and Shabbat services throughout the summer as the congregation celebrates in person and welcomes the new clergy.

"We can't wait for our members and the community to get to know Rabbi Sabath – a visionary leader and international scholar, and the talented Cantor Fox – who is known for creating pop-up choirs and using different instruments to bring liturgy to life," Buchalter said.

Plans for in-person and hybrid religious school programming and High Holy Day services are underway. Also in the works are a community Sukkot celebration and "Havdalah in the Hood" events where Rabbi Sabath will visit members' homes.

"We're more vibrant than ever before so we hope to bring back past members of the legacy congregations who may have taken a break during the transition and COVID," Buchalter adds. "And we invite those looking for a meaningful Jewish community to experience our warm and welcoming congregation."

Maria Johnson Darby

Chief Operating Officer
Keswick

As Baltimore's premier provider of services for older adults, Keswick has offered award-winning programs throughout its 138-year history – even amid the COVID-19 global pandemic.

During the past year, Keswick pivoted its community-based Wise & Well offerings from in-person to virtual. Participants have been able to partake in everything from visual and culinary arts to fitness and brain health, gardening and more – from the click of a computer or mobile device.

"We've been able to deliver thriving online content with upgraded technology," says Maria Johnson Darby, Keswick's Chief Operating Officer. "This had made it possible to engage with long-time members, as well as newcomers from outside of Baltimore and Maryland."

With pandemic restrictions being lifted, Keswick is now presenting a mix of online and in-person programs, along with hybrid options combining the two.

"We are welcoming our members to a safe space as they ease back into the community," Darby says. "We're here for their wellness journey – however they want to take it."

Keswick's 14,000-square-foot Wise & Well Center for Healthy Living has reopened as the destination where older people can pursue their health and well-being goals.

In-person options include one-on-one fitness training, small group sessions, classes with a maximum of 20 people and even outdoor art programs. Open-air drive-in movies, social events and some surprises will be added to the mix as part of Wise & Well's fourth anniversary this fall.

"We have a lot in store to help older adults live their best lives in this new world, and we encourage them to go at their own pace," Darby says.

Hindy Abramson

General Manager
Atlantic Mechanical

Regarded as “Maryland’s trusted plumbing partner for 30+ years,” Atlantic Mechanical specializes in plumbing for builders, contractors and multi-family properties.

With projects ranging from new construction to tenant fit-outs and renovations, the company has an impressive track record of repeat clients. And there’s a reason for that.

“Our team of plumbing estimators, project managers and licensed plumbers is acutely focused on every client. We’re all up to speed on their project details and we appreciate how important reliability is to our clients,” says General Manager Hindy Abramson. “Service and quality go hand in hand.”

Abramson joined the company in 2014, tackling a variety of roles and learning every aspect of the plumbing business. Despite being in a “league of her own” in a male-dominated industry, it was clear to all that she had the leadership skills to move the company forward.

One year later, she was promoted to her current role where she is responsible for “all things Atlantic” – from marketing and management to HR and business development.

A determined go getter, Abramson has spent ample time networking and personally knocking on builders’ doors in order to bid on construction projects.

“We took on the challenges of reaching certain types of clients, and once we did, we earned their trust,” she explains.

Year after year, Atlantic has achieved 42 percent revenue growth. It also has shifted from a B2C operation (taking calls from homeowners) to a B2B model serving builders of custom homes and residential developments, as well as offices, rehab and community centers.

Residential or commercial, Atlantic’s clients can be reassured they’ve selected a great partner for their plumbing needs. They’ll be treated with the respect and prompt responsiveness they deserve.

And they will have Abramson as a champion in their corner.

“From a simple introduction all the way to managing a complex project, my clients know they can rely on Atlantic to get it done,” she says. “I truly enjoy creating and cultivating relationships with our clients and putting them first.”

Reliable. Responsive. Respectful.

Harley and Aaron Magden

Co-Founders
Window Nation

WINDOWS • SIDING • DOORS

Harley and Aaron Magden know windows, siding and doors – inside and out. After growing up learning the business from their dad, they jumped at the chance to make their own mark on the industry and open their first showroom, right here in Maryland.

Fifteen years later, Window Nation has replaced more than 1 million windows and become the country's fifth largest home remodeling business.

With 565 employees working out of 15 showrooms across the country, the company has garnered a 97 percent positive customer-satisfaction ranking.

That's because Window Nation takes pride in building relationships with its customers. This starts from the top as the Magden brothers are personally involved in every project, making sure their customers come first.

"There's nothing more important to us than helping our customers turn their house into their dream home, and we will go the extra mile to ensure their project goes smoothly," the brothers explain.

As CEO, Harley makes it his mission to exceed the needs of homeowners every day. As president, Aaron oversees sales with a no-pressure system he implemented to put customers at ease.

While divvying up business operations, the brothers share a common philosophy: "We take great pride in knowing we offer our customers the best possible windows and doors, installed by the most experienced professionals at the best possible value."

Operating the business as a family, the brothers make it a point to know each and every employee. They also practice the Jewish value of G'milut Chasadim or helping others.

In addition to being major corporate sponsors of the Jewish Federation of Howard County and Cleveland Clinic, the company has donated windows to nonprofits including Boys and Girls Clubs of Metropolitan Baltimore and Habitat for Humanity of the Chesapeake.

"There's nothing more important to us than giving back to the communities we serve," the brothers state. "We don't want to simply operate a business in the town – we want to become a part of the community."
